

ANNE KEEGAN AWARD

for distinguished journalism

Deadline is Sunday, January 31, 2016

The Anne Keegan Award for distinguished journalism reflecting the dignity and spirit of the common man will be presented to the print journalist who tells stories of ordinary people in extraordinarily well-reported and well-written prose.

Distinguished by compassion, character and courage, these stories will give voice to the voiceless while muting the voice of the reporter, benefit from the “eye” more than from the “I” of the reporter, and touch the human heart.

Keegan died May 18, 2011 at 68. Chicago Headline Club pays tribute to her reporting for the Chicago Tribune with this award. Keegan first reported on the little guy while working at the City News Bureau of Chicago. She honed her craft at United Press International before moving to the Tribune’s front page. Her husband, Leonard Aronson, and several of his friends are the inspiration for this award. Colleen Mastony, Tribune reporter, was the first to receive the award in 2011.

No entry fee. Articles may be entered in other Lisagor categories as well. Submit up to three articles to:

CHICAGO
HEADLINE CLUB
PROTECTING THE PUBLIC'S RIGHT TO KNOW

Michael Miner
4027 N. Paulina St.
Chicago, IL 60613